My dearest Adam,

I am sorry, no, very sorry to hear about your "event" with Ed. No one knew what he was/is doing. I did not realize what he had done to me until many years later, over 16 years ago through counselling. Your dad and every else had no clue what he was capable of whether it was just a perversion or if he actually physically touched someone.

You seem to have a lot of anger right now and you should be directing it at Ed and not your dad. I am curious as to what has "now" brought this out in the open. If you can share that info with me, I have deeper insights and experience than you would imagine.

I have gone through the same thought process about my mother. If I thought she knew anything and did not do anything to protect me from him, I would have nothing to do with her as well. That is not my belief. That is why I still have limited conversations with her. I never shared any of this with your dad, so he really had no idea what I went through.

I remember some years ago that you mentioned that you found Ed staring at you one morning when you woke up. Unfortunately you did not share the rest of the story with me at that time. I also thought, thank g-d he didn't do anything to you. I know how difficult it is to come forward as a "victim" to tell people what happened. I am sure you dad would have never allowed you to be anywhere near Ed if he thought there was a remote possibility. I hope you know that to be true.

Adam, If you want to continue this line of conversation, please do so. I do understand what you have gone through and might be of some help to talk to. I am sharing this with you only because I think it is appropriate at this time. I would appreciate you not sharing this with anyone else at this time.

Be well my nephew. Call me anytime if you want to talk or come out for a visit. My cell is 832-689-5429.

Unca Jeff

Dear Grandma Lois,

I'm not sure exactly how old I was, but I think I was around 11 years of age when I visited you and Grandpa Ed at your home in West Palm Beach, Florida. You were still working at the time and it was the same visit during which you gave me an autographed picture from a previous Miss America winner that was working in your office.

Grandpa Ed and I were watching television one day and Ed said that Claudia who was my step-mom at the time, had said I like this kind of movie and then proceeded to place a video cassette in the VCR. I don't remember the details of the movie but I remember that it was pornographic. Ed then brought out vibrators that looked like back massagers that would strap to someone's hand, and then said that it would feel good to put the vibrator on my crotch. He never touched me to my recollection, but I made him aware that I was uncomfortable with it and he stopped.

The next morning, I woke up with Ed sitting in a chair next to my bed, staring at me.

I don't recall it ever happening again, but I have never felt comfortable in his company.

I will not be attending Thanksgiving, but depending on how you respond to this I may be willing to meet you for lunch.

Adam

P.S. - Dad,

When I told you that I woke up to Ed staring at me you said that he was harmless and dismissed it. Not knowing the details of why Jeff refuses to speak with your parents, but knowing that it involves Ed, I cannot understand how you would have allowed me to be in his company without your supervision. I trusted you as a child to protect me and instead, you sent me to someone that you had reason to believe could harm me.
