Professor Chomsky, you should have by now received the email I broadcasted earlier that included a hyperlink to the email Adam L. Tucker sent you yesterday which he had earlier sent me for my "comment".

After making my "comments" I ended by instructing him, "You need to do a major spell-check – and when you have it all in one color, and proofread twice, send it back to me."

Then some 34 minutes later Adam sent me what I believed was his final version.

I found a spelling error in the second word. He spelled "first" leaving out the "r" and I naturally placed a "sic" after it, stopped reading the rest and sent it back to him.

It turns out that Adam hadn't even bothered to either a spell-check or read what he had mostly written to make certain it read accurately.

So what do you think he was doing in those 34 minutes.

Equally important, how important do you really think it was to him that he follow my instructions?

Adam L. Tucker does not have a multi-million Trust-Hush-Fund like my wife's two children which is the result of their very crooked physician father eagerly wanting before he dies to make them even more corrupt than them and of course The IT, in my humble but seasoned opinion, is well on his way to success.

But Adam L. Tucker has yet to find himself on the street or for that matter have to make life and death decisions as do military personnel and better trained the easier it is because so long as you have truth on your side even if you kill a poorly informed soldier on the other side there is always the possibility that you might not have to kill that human being and be fortunate to win them over with the truth, send them back to unit and it is inevitable that they will be become as good if not better than your own commandos who expect their unit commander to always lead the charge; at least that is case with the most elite of Israeli Special Forces units.

I am using this communiqué to try to appeal to your "better senses" and afford yourself an opportunity to join my winning team.
